Dear FDA,

I want to see conspicuous and prominent labeling for all irradiated foods, including products made with irradiated ingredients, adequate signs on bins for irradiated bulk produce, and the labeling for irradiated foods should be permanent, just like other types of consumer labeling. The Codex labeling requirements require that all irradiated foods be labeled as irradiated.

The FDA has no right to call it anything other than exactly what it is, irradiated! As consumers, we have the right to clearly labeled information as well as the right to choose to or not to buy such foods.

Sincerely,
